
Title: Taking Over Trinsic

Author: Videric Gaveston

Sir Dupre Videric took another steak and placed it on the camp fire of Sir Dupre's Camp. Today would be the day when Trinsic would be gained back, or many would die in trying. Videric was not keen on idea of dying, but some short of honour that Sir Dupre had awaken in him made him come. Although he had no plans of charging in the front line, he figured he would still be needed.

After failing terribly with cooking the steak, Videric decided just to wait for the Paladin of Honour to come out of his tent. Hours passed and the sun began to set, it was then when Sir Dupre came out of his tent with a ready battle plan. By then a huge army of volunteers had gathered around his tent. This did not confuse Dupre; as an experienced warrior he did not want to waste anymore time and started to recruit warriors right away.

"Keep the strong warriors at front and Healers at rear", said Dupre. Finally when there was more man than eye could meet, Sir Dupre gave the order to attack. "FOR PEACE, FOR TRINSIC", he yelled. And all men followed him to the gates of Trinsic... the barricades fell as frenzied men with heavy axes

chopped them to pieces.
Nothing was going to stop the army!
The huge army advanced on Sir Dupres lead towards the Dark Temple of the Mistress. This would surely be blow to

Jou'nars face!

Sir Dupre's charge
"NO MERCY" yelled Sir
Dupre
The army charged inside the temple which was protected by zombies and

walking rotting corpses, although the army
suffered minor casualties the undead were beaten quite easily. Sir Dupre rallied the brave men and women on the top of the building where he started to study his moonkey and the pillar.

It was then when Jou'nar appeared from out of nothing, and started to kill men around him. But even Jou'nars powers could not match the number of men. The fallen paladin of Trinsic finally broke and his body fell on the floor. Maybe this was finally the last time world had seen Jou'nar.

Then Dupre placed the moonkey on the pillar and the strange altar opened.

People rushed in bravely to the deeps of the strange altar. Inside they met a black wall blocking their way, however it did not take long until people realised that they needed to touch the stone face to get behind the wall.

Videric gathered his courage and followed.
After this, hordes of zombies and rotting corpses lead by three

Demon lords attacked group where Videric was in. A hard and consuming battle followed, but eventually the protectors of the odd altar were defeated and the army
could advance forward.

The black wall
Brother of Fire and Poison, and fallen brother of Ice.

Next hall revealed the odd nature of the altar, it held an odd kind of machine which seemed to be powered by magic.

Videric was not very sure what happened next as the crowd blocked his view. But from what he could figure someone tweaked the crystal balls on the machine leading the strange machine to loose balance. The effects were destructive, the whole cave started to collapse and people ran out with their lives at stake. Luckily the Army with Videric included

managed to struggle out from the tunnels to daylight.
Outside they watched as the altar fell apart and took the darkness with
it. On the same time the solders destroyed the last barricades surrounding the city. Trinsic was free once again, although many men fell in the battle. It was however clear that deeds of the volunteers would be remembered

forever.